Slideshow ( 2 images ) Bhagwan Gautam said in a party-affiliated online video that India had attempted to turn the virus into a political issue for its Hindu nationalist Bharatiya Janata Party (BJP), which is leading the ruling alliance. “This is an excuse... they didn’t care about the Muslim community,” Gautam said of the government. Gautam added that in a country where almost half the population is Muslim, the government should immediately stop “sabotaging the faith of the people.” India has been grappling with a nationwide outbreak since the end of February, with the virus spreading rapidly in the country’s densely populated northeast, home to a large population of Muslims. The virus has now infected nearly 1,000 people and killed at least 78. On Monday, one of the country’s most vulnerable groups of people, migrant workers, said they would not be allowed to travel to their home states for a month. Most of India’s roughly 1.3 billion population is Hindu, with large minorities of Muslims and Christians. Members of the ruling BJP often discuss the coronavirus threat within the context of a possible “jihad” to fight against the virus, and the government has tightened restrictions in areas where Muslim populations are concentrated. The party has sometimes indirectly spoken about Muslims in blaming the virus on others. Last month, BJP lawmaker Swapan Dasgupta
